Hickok Takes His Horse St. Julian Thorough to the Coast.

From Which He Will Take a Fresh Start Next Season,

And Offers to Beat Any Horse that Wears Hair, for Money.

Attached to the noon train going west yesterday was a Northwestern passenger car containing the celebrated trotter, St. Julian, in charge of her owner and driver, Mr. O. A. Hickok. There were two other horses in the car, one a saddle horse and the other an old trotting mare, "Jennie," all of them going through to California to spend the winter season.

Mr. Hickok kindly giving our reporter a few minutes talk, the first inquiry naturally was after the health of the "King of the Turf," and it was learned that he had not escaped the epidemic prevailing among the equine race but had had an attack of the epidemic, from which he recovered since leaving New York, which was on the 1st.

Mr. Hickok in answer to interrogations put by the reporter, said that he was fully satisfied with the result of the last season, which had netted him $28,000, much more than he had anticipated or hoped for.

The lowest time made was 2:14, at Hartford, Conn. Maud S.'s lowest time was made at Cincinnati, 2:10. The latter is now in Cincinnati where he will pass the winter.

St. Julian is owned jointly by Mr. Hickok and R. F. Morrow, esq., of San Francisco, and is valued at $60,000. An offer of $45,000 was made for him in Springfield and $50,000 at New York, the latter it is thought by an agent of Bonner.

St. Julian was foaled in 1869, and was bred by Mr. Benj. T. Dauning, of Orange county, New York. He is by Volunteer dam, by Sayre's Henry play. He is a rich bay, with a long, lim maime and a long, flowing tail reaching the ground. His head is coupling and long; nose of the Roman type; nostrils large; neck long, and throat and windpipe large. He is deep through the chest and lungs, and of unusual girth; loins broad and strong; his quarters are large and full-muscle, and legs and feet are all good; he has great length from point of hip to point of hock; he has a star on his forehead, and his ankles behind are white. He wears a twelve-ounce nose forward and a five-ounce shoe behind; quarter, hind, shin, and western boots and high scalpers. He weighs 15 1/2 hand, and weighs at present 1,065 pounds. He began his turf career in 1875, and at once gave promise of the wonderful horse he is.

St. Julian in his first year on the turf won six races, and these with only few weeks' training. His remarkable promise attracted the attention of Mr. Hickok, among others, who purchased him in January, 1876, when he was just turned seven years of age and had record of 2:22 1/2, from Mr. James Mulway, of New York. The price paid was $20,000, and the new owners Mr. Hickok, Mr. Morrow and R. Robert Graves, the latter owned at first, the other two a quarter interest. He was taken to California for three months on account of being attacked with the influenza. After considerable trouble with him he was, in 1879 entered in the free for all race at Sacramento, Stockton and San Francisco, and from the day of the Stockton race his owner felt that he could at last surpass with him. His subsequent record is well known.

"I don't think St. Julian will ever beat Maud S," said Mr. H., "for I don't believe they will ever let her run against him, but I think he can beat any horse that wears hair. I am willing to back him next season against any horse in the world. He has confidence in me or not. He made a record at no other horse ever has or can make, and has never broke with him in the race at Stockton in 1879.

He is the fastest trotter in the world and one Chicago man wants to give $50,000 and he can beat Maud S." Mr. Hickok left New York on the 1st, and Chicago, where he rested for several days on the 17th, yesterday. Another stop over will be made at St. Louis. He said he had expected to stop over in Omaha, but found the arrangements could not be made until it was too late in the season. He will go through the season next year with the famous trotter, and will probably take in Omaha on his way to coast.

Young Man With Bright Prospects Fails to Improve His Chances, and Ultimately Deserts His Wife and Home.

About three years ago a young man came west from Harrisburg, Pa., to settle in the thrifty young state of Nebraska, and shortly after his arrival he won the affections and the hand of the daughter of a well-to-do German widow, who owned and managed a good farm, let her by her husband, a Douglas county. As the fortunate fellow was entirely without means of his own his mother-in-law let him have a good team and put him on a farm, allowing him and her own son the privilege of working the teams, and in consideration of their giving of a small mortgage on the same promised to turn the place over to them, which, considering the value of the property, was a most generous disposition.

The young man, however, while industrious and willing, proved to be an incompetent manager, and failing to his part in the bargain lost the care of the farm that had been offered him. He worked alone, nevertheless, from that time until last summer for various farms in the vicinity, using the same in the meanwhile. At the time of getting possession of the team he gave his mother-in-law a mortgage for $200 to secure the payment, but he never made any payment, either on the principal or interest. Last summer he moved with his wife to this city and since then has been teaching out town.

Last Saturday he bade his wife goodbye, to the effect that he was going to drive to the house of a former neighbor five miles from the city, and that he would return the next day. This is the last that has been seen of him by his wife or relatives, for instead of driving to the country he took the train, Saturday afternoon, to an auction sale in this city, where he disposed of the whole outfit, pocketed the proceeds and on Monday night got on the train for the east.

On hearing of his disappearance and investigating the matter with the result stated above, a warrant was issued by Judge Hawes for his arrest, on the charge of selling mortgaged property.

It is but justice to say that his wife possesses to believe that he has voluntarily deserted her or done anything but at he can explain satisfactorily. They say they have always lived most happily together and that there was cause whatever for any such action on his part. At the earliest request she has friends of the young man, who, extremely humiliated by the affair, names are for the present suppressed.

Patti Breen at the Academy.

Criticism stands aghast at the thought of the roguish Patti Breen. This clever little lady made her second appearance tonight on Omaha audiences Wednesday at the Academy, under quite favorable auspices. Like Rosabelle, she came unheralded, without the aid of a name, and deserving most liberal patronage, she like Rosabelle, played to empty seats. As Rosabelle, merry and picturesque, is so Rosabelle that it is impossible to compare her from a serious standpoint. She is Rosabelle, and at the time endowed with such an inimitable spirit of true humor that she is almost surprised to see her contented in a burlesque drama of the merit. Her voice is a sweet soprano, and her natural stage is a perfect. Sentiment or pathos are foreign to her, and her voice and her eyes are only harmonious when she is cutting up. Every turn seems to be only followed with a kick and wink. Rosabelle's caprice and caprice are apparently endless, and her veracity presented a new turn or a new act at the most unexpected moment. Her songs, songs and dances are among the chief features of the play. Such is Patti Breen, the impersonator of a veritable Rosabelle. She played two evenings, played "Chance," was written especially for the leading actors. The dramatist has done his work poorly, although he was probably inspired by the necessity of "proving" the parts, always a disagreeable task to a playwright. As the play is cut out is dated at the varied incongruous features, but when the combinations are perceptible it is lively and amusing. At any time it serves the purposes of the Rosabelle is very fortunate in her part, which is of unusual excellence. For the past seven months she has been on the Pacific coast, and she is a great favorite. She is native of England, and is now making the circuit of the globe, having been at all the principal cities in the United States, Australia and New Zealand, and is now touring America for the first time.

that on some fair should die,
And yet why do we mourn?
For spirit now from sorrow free,
To sunnier climes is borne.

He came and saw, and quickly fled,
Earth had reclaimed its dust,
And in his saving morn'g ray
He reclaimed a lawful rest.

His angels now the throes and sighs
Of sacrifice songs of praise,
While cherubs mingle their sweet notes
With all her heavenly lays.

We will not rest then between the loins,
But yet heaven's will be done,
For our great yet may meet her
When our race below is run.
